

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

ESTABLISHMENT OF MEETINGS.

GEORGE FOX, the founder of the Society of Friends, commenced preaching in 1647, in Lancashire, England, and with such power that meetings were speedily settled in the several counties through which he traveled. It is believed the first was at Eaton, near Derby. W. Thistlethwait says, "Wherever he went, the wave of spiritual emotion swept after him. Conversions amongst all classes began to be counted by hundreds." Among these were Frances Howgill, Edward Burrough, George Whitehead, James Parnell, William Penn, Robert Barclay, and many others, who became devoted servants in the cause of their Divine Master. George Fox says, in 1654, "about sixty ministers the Lord raised up and now sent abroad, out of the north country."

William Penn says: "They waxed strong and bold through their faithfulness; thousands, in a short time being turned to the truth, through their ministry, inasmuch, that in most counties, and in many of the considerable towns of England, meetings were settled, and there were daily added to them such as should be saved."

"Not only," says Thistlethwait, did the new society take firm root in the rural districts and more populous commercial cities of Great Britain and Ireland, in the highest sense it became missionary in its character, for its ministers carried the message abroad into other countries, comprising the British Colonies on the American Continent and in the West Indies. They visited, also extensive districts in Western Europe, and the strongholds of Popery and Mohammedanism, in the regions bordering on the Mediterranean Sea.

"They were consecrated to the promotion of a great work, and they believed intensely the truth that they communicated to others. They were active and assiduous. They traveled, and preached, and wrote incessantly. During this half century alone, there issued from the press of the society, upwards of three thousand separate books and papers, by more than six hundred different writers, all intended to establish their converts or to explain or defend their opinions.

"In support of their principles, they not only labored but they suffered also. Out of the thousands who were imprisoned during the Commonwealth and the reign of Charles II., many hundreds fell a sacrifice to their sufferings, and a large portion of the society retained their religion at the cost of all the property they possessed. On their being discharged from prison they went to their meetinghouse as before, and when the doors were shut by order, 'they assembled in the street,' for they were not afraid or ashamed to meet together in a peaceable manner to worship God, but in imitation of the Prophet Daniel, they would do it more publicly, because they were forbidden."

"At the commencement of the eighteenth century, the society was numerous and widely distributed. In England and Ireland, the members attending its religious meetings were probably about three times as great as at the present time. In Scotland, Wales, and the Isle of Man, where Friends are now all but extinct, considerable colonies existed. On the Continent of Europe, yearly meetings were held at Holland, and at Dantzic. They comprised Friends from Amsterdam, Empden, Frederickstadt, and elsewhere. From 1680 to 1702, meetings were held in North Africa, among Friends in captivity; at Algiers and Sallee, where several conversions are reported to have taken place. In the United States of America, Friends were then, as they are, still numerous; and in the West Indies, which they have long since ceased to occupy, there were regular meetings in the Islands of Jamaica, Antigua, Barbadoes, Bermuda, Nevis, and probably in some others."

The first meetings for discipline, according to Fox's Journal, were settled in the north of England in 1653. The first general meeting of which there is any record, was held at Balby, in Yorkshire; this meeting issued directions and advices, addressed "To the Brethren in the North," containing instructions as to the Gospel order of proceeding with delinquents, and advises to husbands and wives, parents and children, masters and servants, in regard to their relative duties, strict justice in trade, etc. In 1660 a meeting was held at Skipton, "for the affairs of the church both in this nation and beyond the seas;" which George Fox says he has recommended the establishment of, some years previously, and which he adds, had stood several years.

In 1666 George Fox recommended the establishment of five monthly meetings in London--quarterly meetings having been "generally settled before."

In 1668 a general meeting of Friends, from all parts of the nation, was held in London, which issued an epistle to the quarterly meetings. It is supposed that this was a meeting of ministers. In 1672 it again met, and agreed, "for the better ordering, managing, and regulating of the public affairs of the Friends, relating to the truth and service thereof, that there be a general meeting of Friends held in London once a year," composed of representatives from the several counties in England and Wales. In the following year this meeting met, and concluded that the general meeting, constituted as it then was, be discontinued "till Friends, in God's wisdom, shall see a further occasion." The meeting of ministers, however, appears to have been continued annually until 1677, when it was again agreed to convene the meeting of representatives the ensuing year. Accordingly, in 1678, they assembled in London, issued an epistle to the meeting of Friends, and concluded to meet again the next year.

In 1786, ministers and elders began to meet as a select and separate body.

The yearly meeting of women, constituted of representatives, was established in 1790.

Soon after the establishment of Women's Yearly Meeting, and of regular meetings for ministers and elders, the yearly meeting itself was changed from a select and representative assembly to the open and popular meetings which now exists. These meetings "have continued to assemble once a year in London, with unbroken regularity, to the present time." A document preserved in London among the writings of George Fox, has the following:

"At the yearly meeting, Friends have an account once a year from all the yearly meetings in the world, which are about twenty-s x; and Friends at the yearly meeting write to them again at their yearly meetings, so that once a year at the yearly meeting, God's people know the affairs of truth, how it spreads, and how all walk according to the Truth, having a heavenly correspondence one with another in the heavenly society and fellowship."

In 1833, committees from all the yearly meetings in America, except Philadelphia, met in conference to consider several subjects affecting the general interest of the Society. In regard to the establishment or discontinuance of a yearly meeting, the conference reported: "When a yearly meeting is impressed with a belief that it would be proper for it to be divided, or, for its own character as a yearly meeting, to cease," that it should "communicate the prospect to other yearly meetings, and invite their participation in the concern." "The several yearly meetings so invited will exercise their own discretion and freedom, whether to participate in the consideration or not; or whether, in rendering their fraternal assistance, to do it by written communications, or by committees to meet at the yearly meeting concerned, or elsewhere."

In reference to a proposed uniformity of discipline the conference reported: "If this concern should rest on the minds of Friends of the several yearly meetings, and when any of these may apprehend that any important change of a general nature in their own discipline may be attended with advantage, the information should be communicated to the other yearly meetings, with an invitation in brotherly love for their participation in the consideration of the subject."

All certificates and other documents issued by meetings in America, and addressed to meetings of Friends in Great Britain and Ireland, must be forwarded by the yearly meeting correspondents to the correspondents of London and Dublin Yearly Meetings.

EARLY SETTLEMENT

—OF—

FRIENDS IN NEW ENGLAND.

Shortly after the rise of the Society, many of those who had embraced its views, under an apprehension of duty, traveled to foreign lands to preach the tidings of the Gospel to those who, they believed, had departed from the simplicity of the true Church.

George Fox says: "In 1655 many went beyond sea, where truth also sprung up; and in 1656 it broke forth in America."

In Fifth month, 1656, Mary Fisher and Anne Austin the first Friends who visited this country, arrived at Boston from Barbadoes. A prejudice existed in the minds of the colonists against the newly risen sect, and, indeed, against all whose views differed from their own, deeming them heretical, and inimical to the spiritual welfare of the colony. The arrival of "two quiet and harmless English women" was, therefore, cause of consternation among them. A council was convened, and measures adopted to prevent the spreading of the "heretical and blasphemous opinions" of the messengers of peace. Their books were burned by the executioner, the women were imprisoned nearly five weeks, their persons examined "to see if some marks of witchcraft were not upon them;" and the captain who brought them to the colony was compelled to take them back to the Barbadoes. Mary Fisher possessed talents much above the average, "whose intellectual faculties," says Croese, "were greatly adorned by the gravity of her deportment."

Two days after the departure of these two women, a vessel from London arrived at Boston, bringing eight more Friends. Officers were at once sent "to search the boxes, chests, and trunks of the Quakers, for erroneous books and hellish pamphlets." The Friends were committed to prison, and after a confinement of nearly three months, were forcibly sent back to London. They were soon succeeded in their labors of love, by the arrival of Mary Dyer, Ann Burden, and others—all of whom were harshly treated by the municipal authorities.

Notwithstanding the cruelty which was exercised toward them, not only by public scourging, maiming, and banishment, but even to loss of life by hanging, yet the doctrines they had preached, enforced by their patience and humility under suffering, obtained place in the hearts of some of the people, and after much persecution the sect found a resting place in Rhode Island.

Meetings were held in Providence and Newport in 1656 or '57. The yearly meeting was "set up," as Bishop says, in 1661 (the first in America), at Newport; it was set off from London as a regular yearly meeting for discipline in 1683.

EARLY SETTLEMENT

—OF—

FRIENDS IN NEW YORK.

The first meeting established in the State of New York was at Oyster Bay, on Long Island. In 1656, Richard Smith, who became convinced of the principles of Friends while on a visit to England, arrived at Boston, with several Friends from London, whence they were summarily banished, and he proceeded to Long Island, and settled at Oyster Bay.

In 1657, a vessel arrived at New York (then called New Amsterdam) from London, in which came ten Friends, among whom were Robert Hodgson, Mary Witherhead, and Dorothy Waugh, who were the first Friends that visited this city.

The women were arrested for preaching in the streets, imprisoned for several days, and then sent to Rhode Island.

Robert Hodgson went to Hempstead, Long Island, and held a meeting there. He also was arrested, taken back to the city, and put in prison. After suffering much from the cruelty of those having charge of him he was released, with several Friends from New England, through the intercession of Governor Stuyvesant's sister.

The severity of the laws passed against the Quakers in Massachusetts caused many who sympathized with them, as well as those who embraced their views, to leave the colony. Some of them settled in Rhode Island and some on Long Island. In the latter, the Dutch governor endeavored to guard his people against the "Quaker heresy," by enacting laws similar to those of Massachusetts.

John Tilton was fined for "permitting Quakers to quake at his house at Gravesend." His wife, "Goody Tilton," was tried "for having, like a sorceress, gone from door to door to lure and seduce the people, yea, even young girls, to join the Quakers."

Through the faithful labors of those Friends who were engaged in the ministry many of the inhabitants united with them, and meetings were established at Oyster Bay, Gravesend, Jamaica, Hempstead, Flushing, and other places.

In 1666, John Burnyeat arrived at New York, and spent some time there among Friends in going through their meetings. Again, in 1671, he visited New York, and attended the Half-Year's Meeting at Oyster Bay. This appears to be the first meeting for discipline in the state.

In 1682, an epistle was sent to London Yearly Meeting, by the "Half-Year's Meeting," as the records state.

A monthly meeting was held at Oyster Bay in 1672, and one at New York in 1684. Others were held on Long Island, at Flushing, Gravesend, Matinecock, etc., in 1673 and following years.

In 1676 a quarterly meeting was held at Flushing—the earliest on record.

These meetings were subordinate to New England Yearly Meeting. In 1695 they were set off from that meeting as an independent body, although the records show that a yearly meeting was held at Flushing in 1692, and that it continued to be held there until 1777, when it was removed to Westbury, and in 1794 to New York City.

In 1749 the yearly meeting directed the appointment of representatives by monthly to quarterly meetings, and by the latter to the yearly meeting.

The meeting for sufferings was established in 1758. In 1859 its title was changed to the Representative Meeting.

NEW YORK YEARLY MEETING.

In 1866 the Quarterly Meetings in Canada were set off as a separate Yearly Meeting; and in 1869 that in Michigan was attached to the Yearly Meeting of Ohio.

New York Yearly Meeting is now composed of nine Quarterly Meetings, viz: New York, Purchase, Nine Partners, Ferrisburg, Farmington, Butternuts, Glens Falls, Cornwall and Scipio. Its sessions commence on the last Sixth day in Fifth month, at 10 o'clock A. M.

FIRST SETTLEMENT

—OF—

FRIENDS IN PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW JERSEY.

The earliest settlement of Friends within the limits of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting was in 1664, when a few families "found refuge," as Bancroft says, south of Raritan Bay, in East New Jersey—probably at Middletown, or Amboy, at both of which places meetings were held about this time, at Friends' houses. The first settled meeting is said to have been at Shrewsbury in 1670; and the first meetinghouse built in 1672.

Proud says Friends "were zealous in performing their religious services; for having at first no meetinghouse to hold public meetings in, they made a tent or cover of sail-cloth, to meet under; and after they got some little houses to dwell in, then they kept their meetings in one of them, till they could build a meetinghouse."

In 1675, several friends arrived at Salem, from London, and were the first settlers of West New Jersey—that part of the province having been purchased by John Fenwick, Edward Billinge, William Penn, and others.

In their intercourse and dealings with the Indians, the integrity of their conduct gained the friendship of this people. One of the settlers says: "A providential hand was very visible and remarkable in many instances that might be mentioned ; and the Indians were rendered our benefactors and protectors. Without any carnal weapon we entered the land, and inhabited therein, as safe as if there had been thousands of garrisons ; for the Most High preserved us from harm both of man and beast."

The first settlement in Pennsylvania was in 1675, at Chester, then called Upland.

A monthly meeting was established at Burlington in 1678 ; and in 1682 monthly and quarterly meetings were established in Philadelphia.

The first yearly meeting was held at Burlington in 1681 ; and in 1682 one was held in Philadelphia.

"Although in the early settlement of Friends in this country, several meetings were held which were then called yearly meetings, yet in 1683, it being clearly evident that a meeting ought to be constituted which should be vested with a superintending care and jurisdiction over all the meetings in these two provinces and parts adjacent, the yearly meetings in other provinces were accordingly informed of this concern, and requested to give their judgment on a proposition so important and interesting to the society. A united concurrence therewith being freely given, and Friends from New Jersey and Pennsylvania, together with a number of Friends from other parts, having generally assembled at the yearly meeting held in Philadelphia in 1685, it was then "unanimously concluded that henceforward there should be one yearly and general meeting held for the Provinces of Pennsylvania and New Jersey," at Burlington and Philadelphia alternately. It continued so to be held until 1761, when it was removed to Philadelphia, where it has continued since.

—OF—

FRIENDS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA.

It appears that the first Friend to preach the gospel in this part of America was Elizabeth Harris, of London, who visited Virginia and Maryland in 1656, and many were convinced by her ministry. George Rose, writing in 1661, says: Many settled meetings there are in Maryland and Virginia.

Virginia. Rigorous laws were enacted against the Quakers here, as in New England. Persecution apparently began in 1657, when two were imprisoned on landing; in 1660 all Quakers were ordered to leave Virginia, and ship captains were forbidden to bring them, in 1662 heavy fines were imposed on those who absented themselves from church or were "so filled with the new fangled conceits as to refuse to have their children baptised."

Maryland. Here there seems to have been entire liberty to preach and hold meetings except for a few months in 1658-9, during the conflict between the Puritans and Lord Baltimore, when Thomas Thurston, a traveling preacher afterwards disowned for his extravagances, was imprisoned, and two citizens were whipped, one for refusal to bear arms when drafted, and the other for refusing to obey he summons of the sheriff to aid in arresting said Thurston. After this, the persecution appears to have consisted in fines for non-performance of military duties, or any service requiring oaths, and, at one period for non-payment of tithes. In 1666 several Friends are mentioned as holding office under the Governor, and the minutes of the Yearly Meeting in 1677 incidentally show that several of its members had been elected to the General Assembly. The Society increased rapidly; in 1700 an official report to the House of Bishops in London puts the number of Quakers at about a tenth and that of the Papists at about a twelfth of the whole population of the Province, then estimated at about 30,000, the Friends exceeding every other denomination except the Episcopalians who were much the most numerous.

The establishment of a Yearly Meeting dates from 1672, when a General Meeting for the Province was called by John Burnyeat at West River. George Fox arrived from Jamaica just in time to attend it, and by his advice and counsel "Men's and Women's meetings were set up." He also mentions that he attended the Yearly Meeting for 1673 in the same place just before he sailed for England. The Men's Yearly Meeting for 1674 sent an epistle to Men's Meeting of Bristol, England, probably the first epistle from one meeting to another across the ocean that we have record of.

The minutes of the Yearly Meeting for Maryland prior to 1677 are lost; but from that date records and minutes of meetings held every year to the present time are still extant, and it is evident that from the first the meeting exercised the powers and possessed the privileges of an independent Yearly Meeting, and maintained regular cor-correspondence with London and Philadelphia Yearly Meetings from the origin of the latter in 1683. Virginia Yearly Meeting became a correspondent in 1702. In the perilous times from 1765, when the stamp act was passed till 1790, after the peaceful establishment of the Union, delegates were sent from the Maryland Yearly Meeting to that of Philadelphia, together with the usual epistle, for the purpose of holding "a more free communication with the Yearly Meeting of Pennsylvania," as expressed in the minute proposing the plan.

Philadelphia Friends replied "that as brethren of the same family they desire to remain willing to give us any advice or assistance they may be enabled to do, on any matters of importance which we may think proper to lay before them."

For 102 years the Yearly Meeting for Maryland held two sessions annually, alternately at West River on the western shore, and at Tredhaven on the eastern shore. After 1774, the meeting was held but once a year at the same places alternately until 1785. It then alternated between Baltimore and Tredhaven until 1790, since which it has been held at Baltimore. The same year the meetings on the eastern shore were joined to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting and formed their Southern Quarter, while the Quarterly Meetings of Warrington, Pa., and Fairfax, Va., together with the Monthly Meeting of Deer Creek, Md., all of which had previously belonged to Philadelphia, were transferred to Baltimore Yearly Meeting.

In common with all the Southern Yearly Meetings, Baltimore lost great numbers by emigration to the West to escape the incubus of slavery; Ohio Yearly Meeting being set off from it in 1812. Then the separation of 1828 left it only one fifth of its former members, and though Virginia Half Years Meeting was added in 1844, the exodus continued especially during the rebellion, and the membership fell to 500 in 1866. About that time however the tide began to turn, though the increase has been most manifest in recent years.

There are now (in 1884) about 800 members in the Yearly Meeting.

EARLY SETTLEMENT

—OF—

FRIENDS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

In his history of North Carolina, under date of 1660, Martin says: "The Legislature of Virginia having passed laws unfavorable to the Quakers, a number of whom had fled thither from the persecuting spirit of New England, many families sought an asylum on Albemarle Sound."

The first Friend of whom there is any record is Henry Phillips, who removed with his family from New England in 1665, and settled on the banks of the Albemarle.

In 1672, William Edmundson visited Carolina, and appointed a meeting to be held at the house of Henry Phillips, which was attended by many of the inhabitants. W. Edmundson says: "They had little or no religion, for they came and sat down in the meeting smoking their pipes; but," he adds, "in a little time the Lord's testimony arose in the authority of his power, and their hearts being reached with it, several of them were tendered and received the testimony."

There were no edifices for public worship, and it was said that there was not a religious sect in the colony. Bancroft says: "From the commencement of the settlement, there seems not to have been a minister in the land; there was no public worship but such as burst from the hearts of the people themselves; and, when at last William Admundson came to visit his Quaker brethren among the groves of Albemarle, he met with a tender people; delivered his doctrine, 'in the authority of truth,' and made converts to the Society of Friends. A quarterly meeting for discipline was established, and this sect was the first to organize a religious government in Carolina."

No account of the settlements in North Carolina has been preserved, but Williamson says: "A considerable part of the inhabitants were of the people called Quakers." There were also many in South Carolina, some in Georgia, and some in Tennessee—all included in one yearly meeting. The kindly influence of their principles extended throughout the colonies, many of the members of the legislatures being Quakers. During the dissensions and disorder prevailing in 1695, John Archdale, a Friend, one of the proprietors of the colony, "a man of great prudence, sagacity, and command of temper, was appointed Governor of Carolina; he was vested with authority so great and extensive that the proprietors thought fit to have it recorded in his commission, that such powers were not to be claimed as a precedent by future governors." By his influence exemption from bearing arms was granted to all who felt restrained by religious principle. "The whole of his conduct toward the Indians was influenced by justice and kindness."

In speaking of the prosperity of the colony of South Carolina, the commons, assembled at Charleston, say, "We do and shall forever be most heartily obliged to own it as a production of the wisdom and discretion, patience and labor of the Hon. John Archdale, Esq., our Governor," etc.

In 1681, George Fox proposed the establishment of a yearly or half-yearly meeting, to be held "somewhere in the middle of the country" between the Ashley and the Albemarle Rivers.

The first yearly meeting of which any records have been preserved was held in 1708. There appears, however, to have been one at an earlier period, as the records of the meeting in 1755 refer to a "discipline made by the yearly meeting of 1704.

In 1712, the yearly meeting was held at Perquimons. In 1717, B. Holmes says it was held at the meetinghouse in Surrey County in Eighth month, but does not state in what part of the county. It has for many years until recently (1881) been held at New Garden, in Guilford County, but is greatly reduced in numbers, many of the members having migrated to the free states north of the Ohio River. The Yearly Meetings of Ohio, Western, Indiana, and Iowa were established principally by Friends and their descendants from North Carolina.

It is worthy of remark that, while harmony has been marred, the secessions have occurred in most of the yearly meetings on this continent, North Carolina has maintained its position as the advocate of sound Christian doctrine—neither the spirit of misrule nor the principles of infidelity have found a resting-place there to any great extent, and consequently there has been no necessity for the appointment of correspondents in this Yearly Meeting and the names of the clerks of Monthly Meeting are given instead.

FIRST SETTLEMENT

—OF—

FRIENDS IN INDIANA.

The first settlement of Friends, within the limits of Indiana Yearly Meeting, was made at Miami, in Warren County, O., in the latter part of the last century. In 1806, some Friends removed to the "Whitewater River," Indiana, near where Richmond now stands, and where the yearly meeting has since been held. The country was new and very desirable, but thickly timbered, involving much labor and exposure to make it habitable; the immigration of Friends was constant and rapid, principally from North and South Carolina and Virginia, and meetings grew rapidly from this source. There appears to have been much good-will and fellowship existing among them. Most of them were in low circumstances, and it required all their efforts to clear away the forests and procure the necessaries of life; but they cheerfully bore the hardships incident to pioneer life, in the hope of finding a place where they could feel satisfied to have their children settle. The first meetinghouse was build of logs, and, with subsequent additions, was occupied until the first yearly meeting was opened in 1821. Measures were then taken to build a yearly meetinghouse, which was so far completed as to be first occupied in 1824. This house has been sold, and a new yearly meetinghouse erected in the city of Richmond where the Yearly Meeting has been held since 1878. WESTERN YEARLY MEETING.

Was set off from Indiana Yearly Meeting in 1857. It at first consisted of five Quarterly Meeting: Blue River, White Lick, Western, Union and Concord, now called Thorntown.

The pioneer of these meetings, were chiefly emigrants from North Carolina and East Tennessee. Some from Virginia, Ohio and Eastern Indiana.

Blue River is one of the oldest quarterly meetings in Indiana. It was set off from White Water Quarterly Meeting in Wayne county, Ind., in First month 1819, by Ohio Yearly Meeting. The first emigrants arrived in Washington and Orange counties from Carolina in 1810-11 when the Redman had scarcely relinquished his hunting grounds.

As new surveys opened choice inducements, new settlements were formed in the vallies of the White River and the Wabash, in Jackson, Bartholomew, Morgan, Hendricks, Parke, Vigo, Boone and Hamilton counties, Ind., and also in the rich prairie lands of Vermilion county, Ill. The Friends made choice selections of lands and were found, as they still remain, in distinct neighborhoods.

White Lick Quarterly and subordinate meetings were set off from Blue River, Western from White Lick, and Thorntown and Vermilion from Western, and also the first meetings in Iowa.

The settlement at Prairieton in Vigo County was chiefly made by emigrants from Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and together with a neighborhood below in Crawford county, Ill., became sadly broken up by the damaging effects of infidelity which culminated in the Hicksite separation in 1828.

In the early days of these settlements an earnest educational interest prevailed, and good school houses were an indispensable accompaniment to the meeting house. Their schools were among the best common schools in the State until the Public School system was inaugurated under the new Constitution in 1851.

The war of 1812-15 involved these early peace loving people in much difficulty because of their refusal to bear arms and to join in the common defense. Muster drill, year by year was required by law, and its neglect was made fineable. Distraining officers came amongst them for many years and made seizure of property valued many times more than the fine, until the entire system went out of repute, and the compulsory muster law was repealed.

The prejudice against the peculiarities and peace principles of the Friends, admonished them to live much to themselves until time and christian charity broke down the walls of prejudice and gave them a reciprocal influence in the neighborhood and in the State.

There are now fifteen Quarterly Meetings belonging to this Yearly Meeting, viz: Blue River, White Lick, Bloomingdale, Union, Thorntown, Plainfield, New London, Vermilion, Sand Creek, Fairfield, Richland, Chicago, West Grove, Kokomo and West Liberty, and their united membership is according to last census 12,466. Seven of these quarterly meetings have each an Academy under its supervision and management for the education of their youth, above the common school course.

The Yearly Meeting is held at Plainfield, Hendricks county, on Sixth day preceeding the third First day in Ninth month at 10 A. M.

The Yearly Meeting for Ministry and Oversight is held the day preceeding at 3 P. M.

The Representative Meeting is held the day before Yearly Meeting at 10 A. M.

CANADA YEARLY MEETING.

Pershaps the earliest account of the settlement of friends in Canada was about the year 1785 and contained a letter from John Pemberton to Rebecca Jones then in England.

Subsequently a committee was appointed by New York Yearly Meeting to visit them, and a meeting was established at Adolphustown, near the Bay of Quinte, about the year 1798, and subordinate to New York Yearly Meeting. Not far from this time settlements of Friends were commenced at Pelham and Yonge-Street under the of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, Pelham being about 10 miles from Adolphustown, and Yonge-Street nearly midway between.

By the request of the meetings in these different localities and joint action of New York and Philadelphia Yearly Meetings, in 1809, Canada Half-Yearly Meeting was established, and composed of all the Friends residing in what was then called Upper Canada, but now Ontario, and report to New York Yearly Meeting.

In 1841, Pelham became a quarterly meeting, and, in 1848 Yonge-Street and West Lake were formed into two different quarterly meetings, which three quarters now compose Canada Yearly Meeting.

At the Yearly Meeting of Friends in New York, held 1863, propositions were received from the quarterly meetings of Pelham, Yonge-Street, and West L

the establishment of a yearly meeting in Canad subject claimed the very serious and prayerful at of the meeting, which resulted in granted the re Friends in Canada. Accordingly on Sixth day, t of Sixth month, 1867, Friends assembled in a erected brick building, 80 feet by 50, in Pic Ontario, to inaugurate for the first time a yearly of our religious Society in British America.

The inauguration of "The Dominion of Canada
ing the sitting of the first Canada Yearly Meeti felt to be an interesting coincidence, and the repi tive meeting was instructed to embrace the occa offer friendly assurance to the new government, lay before it a proper exposition of the Christian of the religious Society of Friends.

Canada Yearly Meeting is held at Pickering, C

Henrietta Green, a Minister going out as a mission-

The Madagascar Mission is in an active and vigorous condition, and though the lamentable war that has broken out between France and Madagascar has somewhat interfered with the regular working of the society, as well as the due attendance at the various chapels, the reports speak cheerily, and testify to the soundness of the christian faith, and to the growth of many native believers.

The India Mission is more promising than for some time past. The monthly meetings are held in due season, and representatives attend from both stations. In addition to the regular meetings and schools, the itinerant services held at various villages and hamlets in the Nerbudda Valley are productive of much enquiry. Tokens for good are often vouchsafed by our Heavenly Father. The Orphanage under Rachel Metcalfe's management is likely to fill a very useful place in the town.

Friends Medical Mission among the Armenians, at Constantinople, etc. Though not directly connected with the Friends Foreign Mission Association, is a part of the Friends Mission.

Secretary, Chas. Gillett, Banbury, England.

MISSIONARIES AND HELPERS IN THE WORK.

Dr. Gabriel S. Debrashian, British P. O. Constantinople, his sister Damaris, and a boy to help in dispensary work.

Takoubee Karagushian, in school at Constantinople. Kurnian and two daughters at the school at Bahji, on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus.

Bedros Aslanica, M. R. C. S., now assisted to go on with mission work at Erzeroum.

Meetings for worship are regularly held at Constantinople on first days, with an attendance of from 20 to 30.

The demand for medical treatment is sometimes so great that Dr. Debrashian has to limit the number of patients.

The number now attending the dispensary exceeds 50 per month, and about 200 per month are visited in their own homes.

The school has from 35 to 40 pupils and the industrial school at Bahjijig has the same number.

A bible meeting is held in the school room on first day.

We have short reports from other (Friends) Mission fields, as Brumana on Mount Lebanon, Ramallah near the city of Jerusalem and schools in the villages around. They have 9 missionaries, 18 school teachers, and about 250 scholars.

In Boys Training Home 24,

In Village Schools about 350, (boys.)

In Girls Training Home 15.

In Village Schools about 200 (girls.)

Rock Fountain Mission, at Natal in South Africa is conducted by Albert S. and Emma Clark, both members of the Society of Friends; which was founded in 1879. The reports from these stations are encouraging, and in many lands the Mission Work among Friends is receiving a new impetus from the interest manifested.
